LETTER FROM GEORGEO, BARNES

INDEPENDENCE, Kv., Sept. 4, 1888. BEAR INTERIOR:- It is difficult to realize that this quaint old village, with a flavor of mildew upon it, and quite this ished, nuless some imexpected boom strikes it in the future, is within 12 miles of Cincinnati. Every day the northern horison is darkened with the pall of grime and smoke that rises from that busy inetropolls; but the green quietudes of this nuclent bandet are not disturbed by the rush and roar of compierce; and it seems like some dozing grandsire, in his "old arm chair," waiting quietly for the end of all things to come. It has one street-the Covington pike. That meanders through, with a double turn; and the antiquated tenements, built for the most part in the long ago, cling to it, hunn irregular way; fringing its white dustiness for a quarter of a mile; till it shakes them all off and goes its winding way through verdant farms and along picturesque ravines, citywardsami riverwards. One ambitious citizen has lately violated the absolete proprieties by building a fashlonable residence in a somi-Queen-Anne style, that literally glares with newness in the midst of the modest, neutral-tinted, obl-fashloned homes on either side. And "Yorick's" church, gorgeous in a new coat of paint, on the northern outskirt, looks like a diamond ear-drop, pendent from the aurienlar lobe of some superannuated dowager duchess, rustling in faded brocade, and thoroughly respectable to the last. For Independence holds its own in the knowledge that it was the connry seat of Kenton long before apstart Covington, which is contemptuously regarde has only a suburb of Cincinnati, share I second honors with it in that regard. And it stoutly declines being elbowed off the stage by its percent, if more populous neighbor; and still holds its ancient courts in its solid and substantial courthouse, built after the old style, in a roomy square, shaded by forest trees and verdant with blue-grass seel; its "clerk's affice," in respectful attendance, on one side, and the county jail on the other, as becoming its judicial digulty.

The Catholics have a rusty wooden church, that is rarely used, and the colored folks have just dedicated a small, weatherboarded structure at the southern outskirts, where they expect to hold regular services. These the only "stated means of grace," besides "Yorick's"

We enjoy Independence as nowhere else. Here at last we reach a point where opposition, indeed, has not quite died out -that would be the milleunium -but where the "chlefpriests and elders of the people" do not "gather themselves together," nor "take conneil to slay" our gentle, inoffensive gospel of "LuVE and Nothing Else." To preach in a well-uppointed church building, instead of beso ing driven to a court-house; to have that church in fall sympathy with our gospel, through and through; to have a pastor of a flourishing congregation boldly proclaiming bis entire endorsement of our doctrine, of course that can happen nowhere, just now, but in dear George Dunlap's "little flock," where that faithful "under shepherd" feeds bis Master's sheep in the green pastures of G. 1. L. A. N. E.

It is a perfectly huxurious mook for us to stretch our weary limbs in, and these ten days have been as near akin to Paradise as any we have known in our itinerant ministry.

But we had preaching at 11 A. M. and again at 3 P. If I had my way I would always celebrate the Holy Feast, and offer the Holy ning of the real day of Israel-just when the dear LORD instituted it. The "evening and the morning" is the order as the LORD established it in "Creation" and about to swallow up the day; when the devil's darkness claims a momentary where no ray of the sweet light could beearth, and pass by to "behold our devotions," he would say, as ofold, "When you come together, that is not to eat the LORD'S Supper. Whatever else it may interesting Tests Made by the Government be named, it is not the thing the LORD instituted 'the same night in which He was betrayed'."

The preachin here has been as elsewhere-the steady attempt to keep before the people the central fact of the gospel, viz: that the conflict is between tiod and the devil, and not between God and the sinner. That the devil is the intruder, who has captured tiod's creatures by guile; and that the bistory of our race is the lilstory of God's attempts to recover His lost property. That He is balked and hindered temporarily b man's free will, co-operating with the devil; but that He will certainly succeed in carrying out His plans for recovery in the long run. That God is "Almighty" and will certainly never be beaten in such a conflict; nor be reduced to such straits that He will either terment foreyer, or annihilate the wretched creatures He tries in vain to save.

I am sure I can prove all these things from Scripture. How sad, that thel' people, who profess to be guided by tha word, will not even listen to the exposition that so exults the LOVE and grace of our God and Savior; but will gladly hearken to those who, by slandering His character, have given such an one as Col. Two blocks in Sun Francisco were present. In response to an inquiry upon this point, a prominent Republican poli-tician, who will make a good many speeches during the campnign, in a candid moment gave as the solution of this question that there was no way to entime the unisses but to fight over again the battles of the past. It was much easier to arouse the prejudices of the civil con-test than to convince by appeals to reason and an honest discussion of the financial business Issues presented in

In following out this idea some of the Republican papers are reviving the obsolete nomenclature of the war period, and insisting that that party alone was the saviour of the Union, and furnished about all the Federal soldiers. tle practical moment, and moted only as an incident in the Republican manage ment of the present campaign. Democrats who take up the controversy serlously make a surprising exhibit from the records of the war department. They compare the Republican vote of 1860 with the composition of the army in this way:

The men who enlisted in the Union army, it is seen, numbered nearly 1,000,-000 in excess of the Lincoln vote. The personal observation of those who lived in the northern states at the time will attest that not more than half the Republicans went into the army. The voting done during the war would indicate even like Missouri, Kentucky, Virginia and Maryland, where but a irifling vote was east for the Republican ticket, and over 300,000 soldiers furnished the Union army. Those who care to pursue this line of in-quiry can readily find the data for computing the Democratic soldiery at much more than 1,000,000 men. Among the men who ied the armies the Democrats furnished such magnificent generals as Me-Ciellan, Hancock, Meade, Sickies, Thomas, Blair, Rosecrans and others. be left to political glouis like lugalis to defame their memories. Afraid to Read Hoth Sides. woman's national Republican committee is an organization recently started which is doing what it can to further the election of Harrison and Morton. At its head is Mrs. Ellen J. Foster, who in an address advises the women of the country 'to give their best iroin and heart to the study of the principles of government and their application in practical politics." Mrs Foster is extremely practical herself. She thinks that woman's clubs ought to be formed for political discussions, and while dropping a few hints on methods of organization takes occasion to say: you and your household your first information regulariy of current pontical events through Republican papers; better be charged with political narrowness than be peisoned with polltical heresy. Let not pride of opinion or a morbid seif righteousness or a boasted independence in political opinion insidiously beguile you to directly or indirectly give aid and comfort to the

This navice is so remarkably frank that it cannot fail to commend itself, whatever people may think of the political issues of the henr. No one but a woman would be sufficiently innocent to speak in terms so plain. But why is Mrs. Foster afraid to let her sisters hear both sides of the argument and decide for themselves on a plain presentation of the facts? She certainly does not pay them very much of a compliment in desiring it to be inferred that they are unable to discriminate between the true and the faise in political discussion. It is safe to assume that the lady has a violent hatred for the Mngwumps; she does not want their pernicious doctrines to invade the ranks of her sex.—Brooklyn Eagle.

The Republican senate is in another bothersome dilemma. The Chinese restriction bill has passed the house and goes to the senate. If it passes the sen-ate that action will be taken as a criticism of Gen. Harrison, and if it fails to pass in favor of the Democrats so far, but then they did not have so many bad records and dead weight platform planks to carry.

MUTABILITY.

From low to high doth dissolution climb,
And sink from high to low, along a scale
Of awful notes, whose concord shall not fail;
A musical but mulancholy chime, Which they can hear who meddie not with crime,

Nor avarice, nor over anxlous care, Truth fails not; but her outward forms that bear The longest date do melt like frosty rime, That in the morning whitened hill and plata, And is no more; drop like the tower subline Of yesterday, which royally did wear.

His crown of weeds but could not e'en sustain Some casual shout that broke the silent air, Or the unimaginable touch of time.

-Wordsworth.

A PECULIAR BUGGY.

One ilny half a dozen years ago I was coming down on a train from Winnipeg, in the queen's dominious, to Dakota. It was a freight train of forty or fifty empty box cars with a red cab. ose on the back end for the few passengers. The engineer was a wild, reckless fellow, who had, I hink, been drinking, and sometimes he spurted the train up to between nine and ten miles per hour. The time table called for only six, but this dare devil made it average fully even. He didn't altogether forget those things which were behind and press forward, however, because once between siding No. 46 and Big Portage he happened to cirop his pipe out of his mouth while he had his head out of the cah window and actually stopped and backed that long train for fully three-quarters of a mile loo ting for it. The conductor and brakemen hing off the sleps of the canoose and heiped in the search. I put my head out of the caboose window and looked too, picturing a great white meerschaum pipe lying on the ground like a block of sea foam, with just a rich autumn amber tint on the bowl. When the conductor picked it up I noticed that it was clay and had a stem two inches long. The engineer when he took it admitted it was n't worth much, but he said it was one that Billy Higgins, of Q'Appelle, had given him, and be didn't want to lose it. He started to tell how Billy had happened to make him the present, but the conductor said that he inad promised his wife to be home early that the wrong road, says she. 'You can't fool night and reckoned we had better shack me, Mr. Riggles.' 'Mebbe we be,' says Charalong. So the engineer went forward and we shacked.

I went back ami climbed up into the "pilot house" of the enhouse where I had secured a seat by bribing one of the brakemen with a noxions eigar. This gave a line view of the You could see fifteen tilles to any of the thirty-two points of the compassperhaps further. The country was as tlat as a congressional debate. It was 'n the valley of the Red River of the North. A long lank man with this bair and hollow cheeks came and climbed up in the cupola with me and helped me abuse the scenery. He had a wandering eye and abstracted alr and said he had been up to Winnipeg to sell some real estate and was now, as he expressed it, on his way back to God's country. Most of the large for him, though some were too small. He indulged in great lites of dark, forbidding looking tobacco and had a solemn, half dejected expression.

'Coionel," he said, with an inflection which told that he addressed every man he met by that title, "Colonel, what shall we do to pass away the timel I never play keerds with strangers on a train," he added with, it seemed to me, unnecessary haste.

I didn't know of anything to do, except

"It's a go then," he said; "what's your story bout?"

"My story is about a man," I replied unblushingly, "who owned a cow that had only oue horn, and that wasn't much of a horn, you know. It's mostly about the cow," I added desperately, wondering what I could possibly tell about a cow that had only one horn and that not really all a horn should be.

"Sounds first rate," he replied. "But two dollars 'n' a half it 'll be a thundering good story. Mine is only jess bout a feller that took his girl to a shindig—jess a scrub ev'ry day story. Blaze away with your cow

'Couldn't think of it, sir, couldn't think of it for a moment. You go ahead first-I want to hear all about the felier who took his girl to the shiudig."

"Weil," he replied slowly, and I thought ite boked even more solemn than before, "all right-I'il do it-though I'm somewhat anxions to know about that cow. Which horn was it that was gone! No matter, though; I'll know when you tell it. The fellow I was speaking of came down to a fittle town where I useler live, lu ldinnesota, and started a newspaper. It was an awful weak paper, and he was a cussed fool. He was little, and had redeyes, and went around with his bond up like a balky cow with a board over her face, and he didn't know nothing anyhow. He didn't know how to run a live newspaper. I buift a new hen house—one that jess made the hens open their months and cackle when they seeu it-but he never said a word about it in his paper. He didn't seem to have the ability to disense public questions like the at all.

Well, one night there was a shindle out. of town about a mile, at Old Man l'immer's place. It was a big un-they had three fiddlers and the organ they borrowed from the Methodist church. Of course this 'ere Charite Riggles-that was his name-this 'ere editor-of course Charlie must go. He couldn't see a hen house, but he could a shindig. He blowed about it in his paper beforehand, too, and called it a hop, which pred-jerdiced some agin it, too, if he had only knowed it. Well, he went but some six or seven miles on Copher perairie, and got Oid Hoss Perkins' clarter to take to this hop, as he called it. She wan't no caller, sickly specimen-she could precerate the good p'ints of a hen house as fur as she could see it. They got to the old man's bout dark, jess as the head fiddier was turning up.

"Well, the night wore on, which remark I once read, and everything was all O. K. The dancin' was kep' no lively nn' ev'rybody had a good time. Charite, the filler I'm a-talkln' bout, brought the giri to tire blow ont in one o' these 'ere one hoss buggles that has powerful small wheels in front an' powerful big uus behiml. Well, 'long 'bont midnight, mebby a little past, when it was dark as a string o' black cats, 'bont tweive, or mebby some past, I don't know exactly, some o' the boys went out to this 'ero buggy, kinder, an' sorter walked around it, an' hefted it, an' tal .ed a little, an' said it looked like rain, nn' sized up the buggy, an' by an' by sorter somehow changed the wheels on the blamed thing—put the behind ones for ard an' the for ard ones behind, you see. The boys done it, you know, for sort of a joke, I reckon. Mebby they wanted to see if a man what couldn't see a henhouse would catch onto a buggy with its front r'ared up 'n the ar like a treadmill. It made a powerful funny lookin' buggy of it-peared to be built some like a bufferlo-high in front an' low behind. I never seen such a high shouldered buggy before nor since. It looked 'sif it had its for ard feet up'n the manger reach-ln' over into the oat bin. Well, the night wore some more, till 1

they'd better go home. So he hitched up, an' Old Hose darter put on her dry goods-her wraps an' fixin's—an' went out an' got in the buggy with Charlie. Still dark's the inside of a cow-no moon for a month, an' the stars all clouded under. 'There's something wrong with this 'ere buggy,' says Oid Hoss' girl. 'No, muthin the matter,' says Charile, 'wo're jess goin' up hill, that's all, 'an' then they both leaned for ard to keep from fallin' over back'ards. "The giri stiii thought there was somethin' out o' whack with the conveyance, an' said she allowed she'd have to tie a flatiron to her feet to keep from goln' out behind. 'Don't git accited,' says Charlie, "we'se jess goin' up old Dad Hawkins' hill.' So they kep' naggin' along, naggin' along, slow like, an' Charlie let the hoss stop an' rest ev'ry little steeper. So they leaned for ards, an part o' the time hing on to the dashboard with their hands if they did strike a little hill, an' kep'snnilin' 'long, sunilin' 'long,. A good deal of the time they stopped to let the hoss catch his breath, it bein' such a powerful long hill, an' then they'd sit there quiet as a that's all right; that's all right,' says Charlie, 'we're now goin' up old Pap Neil's hili.' 'But where is the holler between old Dad Hawkins' hill an' old l'ap Neil's hill ' says Jule--her name was Jule, 'I 'iow as how the road commissioners must a' filied it up an' made one long hill, says Charlie. So they leaned for ards an' kep' moseyin' long slow, an' lettin' the hoss rest so he wouldn't be all tired out when they got to the top of the hill, an' still it was dark as the inside of a infidel. Mebby half a nour they didn't say nothin', an' then says Charlie: 'Jule,' says he, 'this does 'pear to be a somewhat lengthy hill-seems sif some atmospheric inflocence must 'a' lengthened it out. That's what he said, atmospheric inflocence. They poked a couple o' miles furder, ail the time easy on the hoss. Then says Jule: 'We must be on ile, 'I reckon we might bear off to the right.' do they jagged off to the right, an' went a mice, still up hill. Then they jagged to the left, still hilly. Then they jagged in all directions, and perty soon, after goin' straight up a long, steep hill for two nnies, they turned squar' 'round an' started back, last they still had to hang on to the dash board to keep from fallin' out behind. 'Well, smitten Casari' yelled Charite, 'if this ain't the blamedest country I ever got Into!' an' then he hit the aid boss a welt with the end of the lines. 'I reckon we'll git out o' this somehow, if we i:ill a bossi' An' then they went teariu' round on that perairie with the hoss on the dead run and Charlie a-yelliu', 'Sufferm' Washington!' howls Charlie, 'it's nil hill, no matter where we go, but I'll git out various articles of clothing he wore were too of it or bust?' Then he swung the lines some more an' Jule hung onto t e dashboard an' had the histories. They kep' a goin' for perity near a hour, Charlie gittin' madder n' madder an' Jule more historical. 'Bout then it begun to git a little light, an' Charlie happened to look at the wheels. There to each side of him, as he hnug onto the dashboard, them hind wheels was a-loomin' up, each like the fly wheel on a saw mill engine. Then he stopped the hoss an' wiited. Jule seen the wheels, too, but she didn't wilt. abuse the country.

"I know what," he went on; "let's each Charlie; 'we wou't mention it to nobody—mum's the word,' 'Yes, we will,' says Jule mum's the word,' 'Yes, we will,' says Jule a risin' up an' climbin' out; 'yes, we'il keep you low down, deed hush it up, we will-perhaps! Hanl me all over the perairie in such a lookin' thing, will you, an' tell me we're goin' up hill! Goodby, sir, our paths kinder sep'rate an' lay apart at this p'int!' an' she struck off acrost the country ten miles for home, an' left Charlie a-thinkin', not loud but deep. He didn't know how to fix the wheels, of course, so he

Five cent meals have been often dreamed of, but one that could be eaten has never been known, in this country at least. Everybody knows that there is enough good meat wasted in Chicago every year to feed all the people that so often go hungry, but the trouble is to use it. When we called attention to the high prices prevailing the butchers at once replied that the trouble was everybody wanted por-terhouse steaks and none would use the other pieces that were perfectly good, but not so easily cooked.

But II. M. Kinsley, the well known restaurant man, thinks he sees a way in which he can benefit himself and some poor people at the same time. Such beef as he uses in his restaurant costs 22 cents a pound. An entire enreass costs 8 g cents a pound all through. Buying by the careass instead of by the loin he flurres that he can save the steaks and roasts for the restaurants, and then, with good cooking, make the rest/of the meat mintable, and thus seil wholesome food to the poor nt a nominal cost.

His scheme is to establish a large kitchen in the poorer district of the city, and he says he can furnish good soup and bread enough for four for 20 ceuts, and can feed a family of six for half a dollar. Nothing but the best of material is to be used, nothing that is left over from other meals, but simply meat that is not served in the restaurant. "The scheme is not a charitable oue," said Mr. Kinsley; "it is wholly and purely a business proposition, but if at the same time I can furnish good, rheap food to poor people, food that is ilt for their children to eat, such as much that they now use is not, I think I will be doing a good taing at the same time. Such a place I will have running by winter."-Chicago Herald.

Boring an Artesian Well.

The mechanical operation of boring a well is exceedingly difficult, and many of the failnres to obtain artesian water in tested districts are undonitedly due to the carelessness or ignorance of the well borers, or to the inefficiency of their tools. The American apparatus, most of it patented and manufactured by various firms, seems to combine strength and utility to a greater degree than the European machinery described in text books. A complete well boring outlit can be had for from $400 to $600; and sometimes farmers cinb together, buy an cutfit, and work it themselves, though it is always best to employ a trained well borer. The danger of breaking tools, of dropping something in the bore, or of checking the descent of the pipe, so that a smaller bore must be adopted. are dangers that only great skill can avoid. Weils that start out bravely with a bore of fifteen inches in diameter, often fail to strike water with more than a six or eight luch bore. The flow at the top is of course diminished correspondingly. A well of uniform size throughout, piped with a tight casing, so that the ascending water does not escape "Well, the night wore some more, till 1 into the surface strata, will deliver the o'clock, when Charle, this 'ere youth what thought he could run a paper, said he guessed thought he could run a paper, said he guessed the could run a paper.
